A recognized expert in condominium by-laws, Marco is a resourceful and thorough lawyer interested in finding his clients real solutions, not just quick answers. He is a careful listener and detailed researcher with a belief in addressing the root of a problem rather than surface issues.

Marco joined Fine & Deo in 2000, shortly after receiving his law degree from the University of Windsor. He brings deep knowledge and a notable degree of experience that he has gained from his extensive work on residential, mixed commercial/residential and common elements condominium projects. Marco's practice covers all transactional matters relating to condominiums.

Marco brings a keen interest and genuine enthusiasm to his work in the service side of condominium law. His work in drafting the code of ethics bylaw for condominium directors has earned him a reputation as an innovative trend-setter in the industry. In addition to his knowledge and skill, clients appreciate his professional and personal approach and the way Marco simplifies the process for them.

Recognized for his experience in both condominium by-laws and rule provisions, Marco is often sought out by condominium corporations and their boards of directors who frequently seek his counsel on operational and enforcement issues. He is also a member of the Canadian Condominium Institute (CCI) and the Association of Condominium Managers of Ontario (ACMO).
